Session 2 Academic Writing for Researchers: Writing into Meaning

This workshop is aimed at students and early career researchers who are in the process of doing some writing about their research. It will be conducted in English, with support from interpreters. The first half of the workshop will include a mini-lecture about academic writing techniques to encourage more creative and productive approaches to writing about research. This will include students doing some short writing activities focused around their current or planned research interests.

The second half of the workshop will involve personal written reflection and group discussion about the processes of becoming an academic writer and how researchers can best support each other through the creation of peer writing groups.
